2019 Indian Elections Panel

India's 17th national elections, which recorded the highest turnout since independence, returned Narendra Modi and the BJP to power with an enhanced majority. What are the implications? The panelists debate. Pradeep Chhibber is a Professor and Indo-American Chair in Indian Studies at the Institute for South Asia Studies at the University of California, Berkeley. He studies party systems, party aggregation, and the politics of India. His research examines the relationship between social divisions and party competition and conditions that lead to the emergence of national or regional parties in a nation-state. Sarah Khan is Lecturer of Political Science at Yale. She researches gender and comparative politics, with a regional specialization in South Asia. In her work, she studies gender gaps in political preferences, and the barriers to women's political participation and representation. Prerna Singh is Mahatma Gandhi Associate Professor of Political Science and International Studies at Brown University. Singh's research focuses on the improvement of human well-being, particularly as it relates to the promotion of social welfare on the one hand, and to the mitigation of ethnic conflict and competition, on the other. Milan Vaishnav is a senior fellow in the South Asia Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in Washington, D.C. His primary research focus is the political economy of India. Ashutosh Varshney is Sol Goldman Professor of International Studies and the Social Sciences and Professor of Political Science at Brown University, where he also directs the Center for Contemporary South Asia. His research and teaching cover three areas: Ethnicity and Nationalism; Political Economy of Development; and South Asian Politics and Political Economy.

Long-term Implications of India's 2019 General Elections - Part 1 (6 Jun 2019)

About the Panel Discussion Held over six weeks, the Indian general elections concluded in May 2019 with a resounding victory for the incumbent Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP). As in 2014, the BJP turned the 2019 elections into a referendum on Prime Minister Narendra Modi. However, unlike 2014, Modi did not primarily campaign on the issue of vikas (development) nor did he focus much on his government's track record. Instead, he emphasised, among other things, national security in the wake of the Pulwama terror attack and the subsequent air strike on Pakistan. The 2019 elections campaign was also the most coarse and personal in recent times. The panel will closely analyse the outcome of the elections and look ahead to several critical issues. First, how will the new government engage with the region, particularly Pakistan and China, and the world? Second, what direction will it take on the economy, especially on issues like job creation and the agrarian crisis? Third, what will be the long-term implications of religious nationalism and intolerance on Indian democracy and secularism? ### Dignifying development: Democratic deepening in an Indian State with Indrajit Roy

The Global Development Institute Lecture Series is pleased to present Dr Indrajit Roy, Department of Politics, the University of York to discuss "Dignifying development: Democratic deepening in an Indian State." The lecture draws on Indrajit's prior work on poor people's negotiations with democratic institutions and public policy as well as their ideas about citizenship and membership in its political community. It also signals his future research plans of investigating the intersections of democracy and development in the Rising Powers and other emerging markets. The lecture is a contribution to emerging perspectives on factors that deepen democracy. Against arguments that emphasise the role of economic development, elite bargains and cultural modernisation, Indrajit urges us to take seriously the role of the politics of dignity in democratic deepening. Drawing on the case of the eastern Indian State of Bihar, he directs attention to the ways in which political mobilisation of ethnic identities- underpinned by narratives of dignity espoused by members of oppressed social groups- enable democratic deepening in an economically and socially hostile climate. The causal analysis offered in this paper pluralises the class-centred account of social forces originally developed by Barrington Moore Jr (1966). The Global Development Lecture Series brings experts involved in global development to The University of Manchester. It aims to facilitate dialogue and discussion, providing a space for leading development thinkers to share their latest research and ideas.

Abolish Income Tax and levy 8% GST - Dr. Subramanian Swamy

foundation.moneylife.in/th\_gallery/abolish-income-tax-levy-8-gst-after-bringing-black-money-from-abroad-says-dr-swamy-moneylife-digi

Dr Subramanian Swamy, senior leader of the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) on Friday called for abolition of income tax and levy only one tax, the goods and service tax (GST) at 8% after bringing black money stashed abroad .He was speaking at a book release event organised by Moneylife Foundation and BSE in Mumbai. Dr Swamy said, "For black money, there are two symptoms. One is flow and second is stock of black money. Prof Vaidyanathan's estimate of Indian black money stock is Rs65 lakh crore. Illicit wealth stashed in tax havens abroad by Indians should be declared as national wealth and directed to be transferred to India under the United Nations' Convention on Corruption." The International Convention Hall of BSE where the programme took place was filled to the capacity. The attendees included many eminent lawyers, chartered accountants and senior consultants as well. While elaborating on how the black money can be used, Dr Swamy said, corruption had affected the economy, politics and national security. "Apart from bringing back the black money we need to prevent its creation. Abolishing participatory notes (P-Notes), personal income tax (I-T) and registration charges for real estate is one of the ways to curb creation of black money," he added. Dr Swamy says, "Even today, the tax rates, in my opinion, are unacceptably high. We have a need to have a much higher savings and if you abolish income tax, there would less paperwork, which is there due to the exemptions. If you abolish the income tax, then you begin the new process where fresh generation of black money is going to be discouraged as a consequence." According to the former cabinet minister, some of the black money is sent abroad, while some kept here in India and spent on buying and developing land, especially for building luxurious houses with Italian marble and luxury items. About 75% of our investment is allocated for luxury industry. Another way to spend black money was through P-Notes, where money deposited abroad via hawala route is brought back to as P-Notes and invested in the stock markets. This got boost with the Mauritius treaty and much more money sent abroad through hawala came back to India after this. #### FPA Currents - Greg Ip - How Resurgent Nationalism is Reshaping Economics and the World

Nationalist movements are resurgent, most notably in Britain's vote to leave the European Union and the election of Donald Trump in the U.S. but also in China, India and eastern Europe. Blending language, culture and ethnicity, the new nationalism coincides with and reinforces the declining influence of elite opinion, whether academics, scientists or journalists. From his perch in Washington, D.C., Greg Ip discusses the origins of these trends, how durable they are, whether Canada will join them, and what it means for economists and journalists.
